Board OKs doors, windows for former Victoria Inn

BY MARK CAMPBELL

Madison's Historic Board of Review gave approval for owner Mark Cady to move forward with the next phase of his project to renovate and refurbish the former Victoria Inn.

The Inn, located 801 W. Main Street, had fallen in disrepair in recent years and eventually ended up in a county tax auction with Cady, of Scottsburg, buying the property there and then reaching an agreement with owner Mark E. Nay that allowed Cady to take over ownership sooner and begin the renovation.

The building, which is located in the downtown historic district, came before the Historic Board of Review several months ago requesting approval to replace the existing exterior doors with fiberglass units and windows with aluminum clad units. The awnings that have been on the building for decades will be removed, returning the building to closer to the way it looked in the 1920s than in more recent years.

Cady is investing thousands of dollars in the structure to renovate the 18 existing rooms and bathrooms into 10 larger apartments to be called Old Madison Inn, upgrade heating and air conditioning and clean up the appearance of the building. With all of that in mind, and the fact that the building will be restored to an more historic appearance overall, the board approved Cady's request with stipulations that he install four-over-four windows and seek staff recommendations on choosing door styles that look as historic as possible.

Donald Ball, who spoke on behalf of Cady at the meeting, said each room will now have its own "pack" style air conditioning units and the basement of the facility, which previously housed electrical systems and some rough living quarters, will now house electrical on the north end, an exercise room at the south end and a meeting room in the center. Firefighters respond to water shed blaze

BY MARK CAMPBELL

Madison firefighters responded to a structure fire on Tuesday in a small building that houses water pumps for Madison State Hospital and the Indiana Department of Corrections facilities on the hilltop.

The first units arriving at the scene shortly after 6 p.m. reported heavy black smoke coming from the small shed, located in the 1200 block of West Main Street near the former Madison Country Club tennis courts. Firefighters applied water to quickly bring the fire under control. The structure was undamaged, but the electrical system was severely damaged, Fire Chief Bill DeVries said.

The cause of the fire is under investigation by the Madison Fire Department. Madison Water Department officials confirmed that the pump does not service any residential customers and so residents should not see any changes in water pressures, DeVries said.

He noted the pump does supply the state hospital and corrections unit but the pump was still operational and both facilities have redundant backup systems.

Cell phone purchase leads to two arrests in Milton

BY COLLIN OVERTON

The purchase of a cell phone and pictures supplied by residents led to the arrest of two repeat offenders on theft charges by the Trimble County Sheriff's Office Monday in Milton.

Kelsey Morgan, of Milton, is charged with theft by unlawful taking of more than $500 but less than $10,000, a Class D felony in Kentucky, Sheriff Charlie Kelton said. Morgan's boyfriend and alleged accomplice, Ryan Ward, was also arrested, but won't faces charges until the next meeting of the Trimble Grand Jury.

Kelton said his office received two complaints of theft from residents cars that allegedly occurred Saturday night in Milton, one on McCord Lane through a police report and another through a Facebook message from a resident on Nubbin Ridge Road.

The main item of theft was a wallet that contained a debit card, which was used in transactions at an ATM and Big Lots, Wendy's and Walmart. It was at Walmart that Morgan and Ward apparently purchased a $500 Samsung phone, which was mostly what gave them away and led officers to reviewing surveillance footage from the store, Kelton said. The sheriff's office later obtained a search warrant for Morgan's residence at Rio Vista Apartments.

When they got there Monday, they found Morgan, Ward and evidence of numerous other thefts, like a tablet that was reported missing from a home on Mitchell Road on April 20. The only thing police did not recover that Ward and Morgan allegedly stole was a gun taken from Toleiha Lane earlier in the month. Kelton said Morgan told officers she threw the gun in a creek, but they later learned that she had traded it for drugs.

Neither Morgan nor Ward are in jail due to tightened incarceration policies related to the COVID-19 pandemic. Kelton said Morgan was cited and released Monday and that Ward would be charged during the next grand jury when court restrictions loosen.

Officers also found a small amount of methamphetamine when conducting their search of the home, but that charge will be added on during the grand jury session, Kelton said.

While theft is a problem throughout the county and different neighborhoods — a lot of times involving youth — Kelton said the couple were the main problem in Milton.

"These folks here were making an art of it, they were doing it for a living," he said.

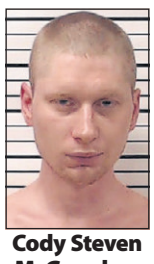
Kelton reminded residents to keep their car doors locked when parked on the street. None of the thefts involved breaking and entering, but all were from unlocked cars, he said.

"On the weekends they've been going around, just checking for cars to be unlocked … if they're unlocked they'll go through it, if there's anything in there, they'll take it. It's a quick get-in-and-get-out, and if a car's locked, they'll just go on somewhere else," Kelton said. "And that happens a ton anyway."

Roadside assistance turns into hostage situation on S.R. 7

BY COLLIN OVERTON

The goodwill of a driver backfired Tuesday morning when a simple roadside assistance turned into a hostage situation on State Road 7.



Cody Steven McGaughey

Cody Steven McGaughey, 28, has been charged with kidnapping and intimidation with a deadly weapon after using a knife to threaten a man who has giving him a ride Tuesday morning and holding the man hostage inside the car until he had reached his destination, said Chief Deputy Josh Taylor of the Jefferson County Sheriff's Office.

Keenan Watkins, 43, of North Vernon, was southbound on State Road 7 heading for work at Advance Auto Parts when he noticed a man, McGaughey, and a woman walking alongside the roadway near the Jennings-Jefferson County line. Watkins stopped and offered to give the two a ride, at which point McGaughey allegedly said "the prostitute can sit up front, I'll sit in the back," upon entering the vehicle, which gave Watkins an uneasy feeling about what was to come.

"Everybody always tells me not to do it, but I always pick people up, because I've been walking before and I know that maybe it's a really bad situation and they need to get somewhere," Watkins said.

Carroll, Trimble reporting low COVID-19 numbers

BY COLLIN OVERTON

While communities on the Indiana side of the Ohio River have reported dozens of confirmed COVID-19 cases, the Kentucky side of the Courierarea is reporting much lower numbers.

As of Wednesday morning, Trimble County had three confirmed cases and Carroll County had two, according to the North Central District and Three Rivers District Health health departments. All cases have recovered and been released from isolation, both health departments reported Wednesday.

Across the commonwealth, 4,375 positive cases, 225 deaths and 52,411 tests had been recorded as of Tuesday at 5 p.m. Owen County, which borders Carroll County and is also overseen by the Three Rivers District, reported just its first case Tuesday.

Neighboring counties are mostly higher, with Shelby reporting 29 cases and Henry and Spencer reporting six each, according to the North Central District. In the Three Rivers District, Gallatin has one, Owen now has one and Pendleton five.

Roanya Rice, public health director for the North Central District, said the distance from urban centers, large proximity between people in rural communities and a

One dead in Jeffersonville police-involved shooting

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

Detectives from the Indiana State Police are investigating a police-involved shooting early Wednesday morning on Middle Road in Jeffersonville that sent one man to University Hospital in Louisville where he was later pronounced dead.

The preliminary investigation reveals that shortly before 1 a.m. Wednesday, an ISP trooper from the Sellersburg post made a traffic stop on a passenger car for no taillights while on Middle Road near Loma Vista Court in Jeffersonville. Two individuals occupied the vehicle and shortly after making the traffic stop, the trooper requested an ambulance relaying that the female driver of the car was possibly having a medical issue.

The trooper continued speaking with the male passenger who had allegedly given a false name to the officer. That passenger was later identified as Malcolm Xavier Ray Williams, 27, of Clarksville, Indiana. A short time later, investigators believe Williams brandished a handgun and fired upon the trooper. The trooper returned fire and struck Williams, who was then transported to University Hospital in Louisville, where he was later pronounced dead.

The driver was not injured in the incident; however, the trooper did receive a powder burn and abrasions from the apparent proximity of the suspect's gun.

This investigation is ongoing, and no charges have yet been filed in this case. Indiana State Police detectives from the Versailles district are investigating the shooting and the Jeffersonville Police Department assisted units at the scene.

COVID-19 antibody test available at KDH

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

King's Daughters' Health is now providing antibody testing for the COVID-19 coronavirus.

Antibody testing is available to anyone at a cost of $75 per test. If desired, patients may file a personal claim with their insurance provider for potential reimbursement.

The hospital's COVID-19 Clinic continues to serve as a coronavirus test site but unlike those tests, which determine if a patient is currently positive for the virus, the antibody tests looks for specific markers indicating whether a patient has previously contracted COVID-19 and possibly not known that. Many people are thought to have contracted the virus and recovered while experiencing mild or no symptoms.

A positive antibody test indicates only that the individual tested has previously contracted COVID-19, whether known or unknown. Unless otherwise specified during registration, patients will receive testing results via mail.

Based upon CDC guidelines, patients who have been sick — whether tested for COVID-19 or not — should wait at least three weeks from the onset of symptoms to complete the antibody test. Patients who may have previously been sick — dating as far back as December — or those who think they might have been asymptomatic, showing few or no symptoms, may be tested at any time.

Testing is currently limited to a specific number of tests per day, so it may take a few days to schedule the antibody test. Healthcare workers and first responders receive top priority.

To schedule a COVID-19 antibody test through KDH, patients may contact the COVID-19 Hotline at 812-801-8010 or call their personal care physician or nurse practitioner.

Patients who receive a positive antibody result are encouraged to speak with their provider about donating plasma to help treat other patients who test positive for COVID-19, a course of treatment that has been life-saving for some patients suffering from the virus.

Antibody testing also allows local and state health departments to understand the impact of COVID-19 in the communities KDH serves and get a more accurate picture of how many people actually contracted the virus locally as opposed to the number of positive cases that have been reported.

Foundation's Rapid Response helps nonprofits

BY SPECIAL REPORT TO THE COURIER

The Community Foundation of Madison and Jefferson County has awarded $37,400 to nonprofit organizations through the Rapid Response Grant Program. These grants, designed to address the immediate needs of nonprofit organizations serving Jefferson County, have provided care packages, personal protection equipment (PPE), rent assistance, and covered the basic needs of Jefferson County residents, to name a few.

Organizations receiving grants include: Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Ivy Tech Community College, King's Daughters' Health, Lide White Memorial Boys and Girls Club, Madison Main Street Program, Safe Passage, The Salvation Army, Southeastern Indiana Voices for Children Inc., Southwestern Jefferson County School Corp.

Grants for the Rapid Response Grant Program are funded by the Disaster Relief Fund at the Community Foundation. The simple online application for the Rapid Response Grant Program is currently open. Application details and link are available at www.cfmjc.org. Eligible nonprofit organizations may apply for up to $5,000 to address immediate needs related to the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic. Grants WILL NOT be made directly to individuals.

The Community Foundation understands these are challenging economic times. For those who are able, donations to the Disaster Relief Fund can be made online or by mail. When writing a check, please indicate "COVID-19" in the memo line. Donations may be mailed to P.O. Box 306, Madison, IN 47250. When donating online, please type "COVID-19" in the "Fund you are donating to" field. Online donations can be made at https://www.cfmjc.org/give_now.php. (Please refrain from using a mobile device for online donations.)

Established in 1991 by a group of local volunteers, the Community Foundation of Madison and Jefferson County fulfills the mission of building a strong, vibrant community by helping donors provide perpetual funding for the people, projects, and passions of Jefferson County.

For more information about the Community Foundation and its programs, contact Bill Barnes at 812-265-3327 or email bill@cfmjc.org.

NUMBERS

lack of testing availability is likely to blame for the small numbers so far.

Kentucky's testing testing capabilities have paled in comparison with neighboring states, but Rice said that could change soon, as the state began partnerships with UPS, Kroger and private testing lab Gravity Diagnostics to set up drive-through testing sites with a 10-14-day turnaround on results.

The closest city getting a drive-through lab is Shelbyville, she said, and even that will be more limited in capacity than others.

Both Trimble and Carroll school systems will remain closed the rest of the school year and continue take-home work after Gov. Andy Beshear recommended all schools do so on April 20. Both school districts are also continuing their meal pickup and drop-off plans for disadvantaged students far past their original projections of when the shutdown might end.

Factories in Carroll County, an industrial center for the region, are being especially cautious and taking temperatures of every employee reporting work, Christina Perkins, public information officer for Three Rivers said. Carroll's first case was an employee of North American Stainless who was confirmed positive on March 26.

While so far avoiding a wide community spread, Carroll County is seeing all the other effects, Judge Executive Harold "Shorty" Tomlinson said. On top of the financial hit to businesses, the county is missing out on its busy tourism season with General Butler State Resort Park closed, and this year's budgetary session at the state did not provide the amount in road funds the county was hoping for to use on summer projects, he said.

Quite a few restaurants are struggling like everywhere else and providing carryout options, Tomlinson said. He said he knew of two that were either planning to open or expand just before the pandemic hit.

To help meet community needs, Carroll County Fiscal Court recently donated $10,000 to the county's food pantry and gave $40,000 to the Northern Kentucky Community Action Commission this year, which provides developmental and supportive services to people in Carroll, Campbell and six other counties, Tomlinson said. Fiscal Court usually budgets $20,000 for the agency, he said, but they've been a vital service through the shutdown.

What's helped keep numbers low, he said, has been the action, or lack of, from residents. Since getting its first case before neighbors Trimble, Jefferson and Switzerland counties, Carroll has been diligent in not letting the virus spread.

"People have been understanding and willing to take this serious, and they've done that. And that may reflect some of the numbers, actually, that we're not seeing," Tomlinson said.

Main Street awards business resiliency grants

BY SPECIAL REPORT TO THE COURIER

Madison Main Street announced today that it will be awarding a total of $10,900 in grants to 28 downtown businesses to help cover May rent or mortgage payments. This was identified as a top concern by downtown businesses trying to survive the pandemic, which has forced many to close, reduce hours, or completely change their business model.

According to Executive Director Austin Sims, grants ranging in amounts from $175 to $750 were awarded to: Taylor's Tae Kwon Do Academy, Greves TV and Appliances, RoundAbout Madison, Suntime Printing, The Floating Cow, Blue Lotus Massage Therapy, Ditto's, East Industries, Mary's Shear Perfection, Natural Blessings, K&K Beauty Studio, Main Street Antique Mall, Thomas Family Winery, G.H. Coffee, Wow! What a Find, Indigo Massage, Purple Chandelier, Madison Made by Euclid & Woodland, Eco-Massage, Fountain Alley Body Care, Body Works Salon, Fine Threads, Just the Word, Blush on Main, Village Lights Bookstore, The Downtowner, Stretch Zone Massage, and Scrub Board Laundry.

The grants are awarded through Main Street's new Business Resiliency Fund, made possible by contributions from the Community Foundation of Jefferson County, the John and Maureen Wurtz Charitable Fund, the Dorsey Family Endowment, and individual contributions from Rick Berry, Jarrett Boyd, and members of the Madison Main Street board of directors.

The grants, covering up to 50% of the monthly payment, are distributed to businesses on a reimbursement basis. Madison Main Street, a 501©(3) nonprofit, is actively soliciting additional contributions to the Business Resiliency Fund. Any new funds will be awarded to downtown businesses for rent/mortgage relief for the month of June.

"It will take businesses several months to recover from the financial losses they have suffered," Sims said. "We don't want to lose any of our downtown businesses and hope this fund will make a critical difference."

HOSTAGE

The two were apparently taking a walk down the road from McGaughey,'s house after getting into an argument that prompted McGaughey,'s father, whom he lives with, to call police to the residence, Taylor said.

Watkins at first thought McGaughey, had a head injury of some sort, as he was walking in the middle the roadway. He could tell McGaughey, was either high on something or mentally ill based on his behavior and said he made random claims upon entering the vehicle, like that he was a "client of the prostitute" and that he was a cop because of his Punisher tattoo.

After the two got into the car with McGaughey, in the back and drove for a quarter mile, McGaughey, allegedly drew a knife and held it close to the back of Watkins' neck, commanding him to drop the woman off on the side of the road and drive him to McGaughey,'s own house, or else he was going to "shove it into my throat," Watkins said. Watkins complied, letting the woman out, then turning around on S.R. towards North Vernon, the direction of McGaughey,'s home.

Watkins remembers trying to keep McGaughey, calm as the man ranted and mumbled on the way there, offering him drinks of his sweet tea and telling him it would be OK.

"I was not as calm a person, I'd say, in my younger years. For the past decade now —14 years since I had my son — I'm just trying to do good things as much as I can, stay calm, that's just who I am now. I was putting myself in his shoes and thinking 'This poor guy, he's whacked out of his mind, he doesn't know what he's doing'; I'm trying to help him."

Watkins then drove a couple of miles until he reached McGaughey,'s house in the 9000 block of S.R. 7, where McGaughey, instructed him to park. Sheriff's deputies who were already there to respond to the argument call surrounded McGaughey, and placed him under arrest, Taylor said.

After McGaughey, was arrested, Watkins was interviewed by Taylor and called his boss, who could tell he was shaken up and allowed him to take the day off.

McGaughey, was booked into the Jefferson County Jail at about 12:03 p.m. Tuesday on charges of intimidation with a deadly weapon and kidnapping. The woman has not been charged, Taylor said.

The misfortune didn't stop there for Watkins; after being excused from work that day, his fuel pump stopped working on his way home and his boss had to give him a ride home.

"It was a great day yesterday," he said.

MLB opening options include 3 regional divisions

BY RONALD BLUM
AP BASEBALL WRITER

NEW YORK — Major League Baseball is exploring various options that could allow the season to start if the medical situation allows, including a plan in which the 30 teams might be split into three regional divisions.

Among the formats under consideration is one in which teams could be restricted to playing within their region, two people familiar with the discussions said Tuesday. The people spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because no public statements were authorized.

That plan, if used, would break up the traditional alignments of the American and National Leagues. It also would cut travel during the coronavirus pandemic.

MLB also has looked at configurations for all-Arizona, Arizona-and-Florida and Arizona-plus-Texas-plus-Florida locations, the people said. The latest plan was first reported by USA Today.

Another variation would have teams start in Arizona, Texas and Florida, playing in empty ballparks, and then if the health situation allows, switch later to their regular-season sites. If conditions improve later in the year, they possibly could start playing before fans with only a percentage of seats sold.

Opening day had been scheduled for March 26, but the new coronavirus caused MLB to delay the start to mid-May at the earliest.

Any plan would be subject to medical approval plus consent of federal, state and local authorities. Any schedule with games at neutral sites or without fans would require an agreement between MLB and the players' association.

Baseball officials have told the union of their thinking but have not made any formal proposals.

Baseball also is considering expanding the playoffs beyond the current 10-team format. Officials have discussed extending the playoffs into November or possibly even December, using domed ballparks and warm-weather cities.

Any plan would be contingent on baseball gaining access to test about 3,000 people on a regular basis: about 1,200 players plus staff and broadcast personnel. Players most likely would need three to four weeks of workouts before opening day.

Baseball officials have been encouraged by statements about the prospect of starting the season from President Donald Trump, Govs. Greg Abbott (Texas), Andrew Cuomo (New York) and Tom Wolf (Pennsylvania) and Chicago Mayor Lori Lightfoot, one of the people said.

In a sign of baseball's significance, Cuomo appointed Yankees president Randy Levine and Mets chief operating officer Jeff Wilpon to his New York Forward re-opening advisory board on Tuesday.

Hurler Thurston anxious for minor league season to start

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

As he has done every April for the past 20 years, Ryan Thurston spent Monday afternoon throwing a baseball around. But rather than throwing off a mound getting ready for a game, it was some long-tossing on a soccer field just trying to stay in shape.

Such is life for the former Madison Consolidated High School star, who is expected to begin his third season of Minor League Baseball this summer. But like hundreds of others, he has no idea when that summer will officially begin.

— Ryan Thurston

"It's been hard. You're just not sure what's going on," Thurston said. "I'm just trying to stay in shape and trying to be ready whenever the time comes."

After wrapping up a successful prep career at Madison in 2013, Thurston headed to Western Kentucky University where he quickly became one of the Hilltoppers' top arms. He went undrafted after graduating from WKU but signed with the Toronto Blue Jays organization in 2018 and spent the summer with Dunedin of the Florida State League and Bluefield of the Rookie Appalachian League.

In a combined 13 games — four starts and eight relief appearances at Dunedin and a relief appearance at Bluefield — the left-handed Thurston was 1-2 with a 0.87 ERA in 31.0 innings pitched. He struck out 37 and walked eight with a .140 average against and 0.74 WHIP.

Despite those impressive numbers, Toronto released Thurston in the offseason but he signed with the Chicago Dogs of the Independent American Association. He pitched in two games for Chicago before jumping to the Gary SouthShore RailCats of the same league where he spent the rest of the season.

In 36 appearances for Chicago and Gary — all in relief — Thurston posted a 4-1 record with a 2.59 ERA and four saves. He struck out 49 batters and walked 28 in 55.2 innings.

"I was happy with the way the season went," Thurston said. "I felt very comfortable and liked the way I was throwing."

Thurston had already re-signed with Gary and was looking forward to the season when the COVID-19 pandemic shut down all sports across the country. Although not affiliated with Major League Baseball, the American Association appears to be taking its cues from the bigger league.

David Campbell

Former Madison Cub pitcher Ryan Thurston long-tosses during a workout at Southwestern High School on Monday. Thurston is planning to begin his second season with the Gary Southshore RailCats of the independent American Association this summer but the start of the season is on hold due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

"We usually report in the first week of May and the first games were set for the 19th. Now, we have no idea when things will begin," Thurston said. "I'll be ready whenever that is. Of course we'll still need about two or three weeks to get ready. We can't walk right into games. But hopefully by June we can get back out there."

For now, staying in shape is Thurston's biggest priority. He said he's been doing his normal exercises throughout the spring while trying to get some throwing in here and there. But his usual routine has been thrown out the window.

"Usually I go to a gym and I have certain workouts I use but all of those are closed. I had been going to the school and throwing but it's closed," Thurston said. "Right now it's usually me and my dad throwing the ball around in the street and whatever else I can find. It gets the job done."

On Monday, Thurston and his father Dan, a former head baseball coach at Madison, met with Southwestern sophomore Zach Cole on the soccer field at Southwestern High School. There were no worries about social distancing; Thurston and Cole spent the 25-minute workout long-tossing the ball, starting at around 40 feet and eventually throwing from well over 100 feet.

"You just do what you can do," Thurston said. "Whatever gets the job done."

Like any player in the independent leagues, Thurston still has a desire to return to the affiliated leagues with the hopes of eventually reaching the majors. He had hoped to use this summer to showcase his skills, but now must wait to even get on a mound.

"Obviously every one of us out there wants to get into the affiliated leagues. That's the ultimate goal," Thurston said. "I'm not sure what to expect this year but I'll see what happens."

NCAA board supports name, image and likeness compensation

BY RALPH D. RUSSO
AP COLLEGE SPORTS WRITER

The NCAA is moving forward with a plan to allow college athletes to earn money for endorsements and a host of other activities involving personal appearances and social media.

The NCAA announced Wednesday that its Board of Governors supports a plan that gives athletes the ability to cash in on their names, images and likenesses as never before and without involvement from the association, schools or conferences.

Ohio State President and board chairman Michael Drake called it an "unprecedented" move by the NCAA.

The next step is for membership to draft legislation by Oct. 30. A formal vote will be taken by schools at the next convention in January and new rules will go into effect no later than the 2021-22 academic year.

"NCAA membership schools have embraced very real change," NCAA President Emmert said in a conference call with reporters Wednesday.

The nation's largest governing body for college sports said it will still seek a federal law to keep individual states from passing their owns laws on compensation for college athletes.

The board on Monday and Tuesday reviewed detailed recommendations put forth by a working group led by Ohio State athletic director Gene Smith and Big East Commissioner Val Ackerman. The recommendations took an aggressive approach, opening the door for athletes to make money on everything from autograph signings and memorabilia sales to signing endorsement deals with companies large and small.

College athletes will not be allowed to use their schools' logos or markings in any sponsorship deals, but they will be permitted to use agent representation in making any deals.

Smith said there will be "guardrails" in place to ensure athletes are being compensated at an appropriate rate for their services and there will be consequences for athletes who do not meet disclosure requirements.

Payments to athletes will not be permitted to be used as recruiting inducements to high school athletes.

The need for change was sped up by pressure from state lawmakers. California was first to pass a bill into law that would make it illegal for NCAA schools to prohibit college athletes from making money on endorsements, social media advertising and other activities tied to name, image and likeness.

Dozens of states have followed California's lead, some more aggressively than others. California's law does not go into effect until 2023 while a Florida bill awaiting the governor's signature would go into effect July 2021.

"It's clear we need Congress' help in all of this," Emmert said.

NCAA leaders have already been engaged with federal lawmakers.

The working group was put together about a year ago, but its work kicked into high gear since the NCAA convention in January.

Nix decommits to play in G League

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Nevada high school senior Daishen Nix has decommitted from UCLA and signed to play in the G League next season, joining fellow prep stars Jalen Green and Isaiah Todd in going pro.

G League president Shareef Abdur-Rahim said Tuesday the trio will play for a new team that won't be affiliated with any existing G League franchise or NBA team. Details will be announced later.

Nix was named a McDonald's All-American at Trinity International School in Las Vegas this season. The 6-foot-5 guard was ranked by ESPN as the top player in Nevada and 20th in the nation.

He had signed a national letter of intent with UCLA in November. Nix was UCLA coach Mick Cronin's first signing since being named the Bruins' coach in April 2019.

Watkins realizes her long-held musical dream

CHARLIE ROHLFING
CHARLIE'S BEAT

"When I was 15 years old I wanted to learn guitar," relates Margo Watkins. "But my father, maybe worried about the evils of rock 'n' roll, said no, I should stick to the autoharp, which is a traditional instrument used in old time folk music.

"But I'm a rock 'n' roll girl at heart, always have been. My parents did let me have the Jesus Christ Superstar album, which is a rock opera, and I flat wore that thing out. But there would be no guitar for me back then. It would have to wait.

"Now I need to back up and explain that I grew up in an extremely musical family. My dad played many instruments, and mother played piano, mandolin and fiddle. She had the voice of an angel. We sang as a family all the time. And we went to lots of concerts and music events. But it was all traditional and old time music, mountain style and early folk.

"And don't get me wrong, I love that old style music, especially the harmonies. To this day when I hear a song I can hear all the harmony parts in my head, all at once. It's like I grew up in a home where a second language was being spoken, and that language was music. It's just natural for me now.

"But no guitar, and almost no popular music. So, life happened, as it does for everybody. Marriage, work, kids. I married Kevin and we moved here to Madison and bought Pets Doc Animal Clinic. But when I turned 50 years old something just clicked.

"I thought to myself, if I'm ever going to play guitar, it's now or never. So I picked it up and I asked Kevin to start teaching me.

Submitted

Everybody who knows Kevin calls him Guitar George, because 'he knows all the chords'. He's a great teacher and he got me started on the right path.

"That was about eight years ago, and I've probably put in thousands of hours practicing. The finger picking patterns with my right hand are like second nature now, almost as if God was guiding my hands since I had to wait so long to get started. It's just important to me. I feel like I'm making up for lost time, for myself.

"Which brings me to my later-in-life music career here in Madison. Even before I picked up the guitar, about 10 years ago, I was at Thomas Family Winery watching Greg Ziesemer and Kriss Luckett play. And they did this song about the L&N Railroad that I grew up singing. I yelled out 'I know that song!' And they invited me up to sing with them.

"That was a huge confidence boost, to get up in front of people and sing. It got me thinking. Plus Greg's guitar playing style was a big inspiration. More singing opportunities came along, like O' Madison Where Art Thou, Madison Graffiti and a show called This is Jazz which was staged in the building that would later become the Red Bicycle Hall. It was such an honor to be included in those productions.

"Then with Jimmy Davis' encouragement I started playing the open mic nights at the Legion and ultimately the Taproom. I had about three songs I could pull off, but I kept getting more confident.

"Bill Lancton helped me get to the next level with my guitar playing, and Amy Noel has been a great example and a positive influence. I probably have more than an hour of songs now that I can play and sing out in public.

Dear Annie: I was very close to my grandmother, and when she died, I felt guilty at times, thinking that I might have been sharp with her. She had always been like a mother, and a friend. I guess I was mad that she was getting older. She never got bad enough that we couldn't have a coherent conversation about how she felt.

She would ask me to sing songs I knew she liked, and she remembered every word. She would recall funny stories about the family that always brought a smile to her face. She was always so mad at herself when she couldn't remember a word, or forgot what she was going to say.

I knew there would be a time when I would lose my buddy as I knew her. She would stare with a vacant look in her eye, and I always wondered where she was. I would always make a joke of it so as to not make her feel embarrassed. She would always make up something to not worry me, but I knew at that moment she wasn't with me.

I took her on walks, and she was in excellent health for 90. And very attractive. I was still sad, though, wondering if she was afraid. She had long ago told me that people don't realize that when you age, no matter how old, you are always the same person inside.

I started writing these observations down, and soon it was in poem form and people were asking for copies. Some even had it framed. It assuaged the fear and sadness in regard to our projections and conjectures about what people her age might be going through. So with what I had written down, along with what Grandma was able to tell me, I composed a poem. I hope it helps those who are, or will be, touched by this ugly part of aging.

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

A LETTER FROM GRANDMA

"I've seen the way you look at me when you think I haven't heard what you said.

"Truth is I heard you, but I'm at a new place now, and it's somewhere in my head.

"I understand it scares you, but it's because it's all so new.

"Time was when it scared me, and made me more than a little mad too.

"But I've found this field of daisies where the skies are always so blue,

"I can jump so high and run so fast — I'm so very young again I hardly have a past.

"I've seen you worry, and I know you stew

"Sometimes you even get mad — I know that you do.

"It's because you love me, and you don't understand that what's happening to me is all part of a plan.

"Sometimes from where I am I think I see my mother.

"I see everyone I've ever loved, first one and then the other.

"When I'm here, I have strength, not an ache or a pain.

"I can play baseball or hopscotch and take long walks in the rain.

"Here It doesn't matter if I forget what I wanted to say.

"It all happened so slowly, but someday you'll understand.

"Even you will visit this new place, and when you do, you and I will walk hand in hand." — Jim Aitken

Dear Jim: Thank you for sharing your beautiful poem. You were a wonderful grandson, and no one appreciated you more than Grandma.

Toxic celebrity worship

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I am so tired of fake people on the internet. Every day we see countless stories about the latest gossip on certain celebrities and athletes. Is it necessary that we have to know about everything they say and do, who their latest "soul mate" is, the expensive things they give their kids, who broke up with whom, where they ate out, how much money they have?

Their faces are constantly pushed in our faces (along with their other body parts). These "famous for being famous" women seem to have had a lot of cosmetic surgery. I think that sends a very negative picture of life to our children and teenagers. I know that a lot of people feel the same way that I do; just look at the comments section of any article about these types of people. Why does anyone care about these celebrities? — Ordinary Real Person

Dear Real Person: Be the change you want to see in the media. When you click on a story and leave a comment (even if it's a negative one), you're effectively encouraging the publication of more stories of that ilk. Don't interact with content that you find frivolous or toxic.

Dear Annie: I just read the response from the parents who seemed to be patting themselves on the back for how they handled their child who dropped out of school. I'll bet most of your readers, including "Been There, Done That" are unaware that, according to the National Center for Learning Disabilities, 1 in 5 children who have learning or attention issues, including disabilities like dyslexia and dyscalculia, drop out of school. These disabilities affect reading, writing, math, organization, focus, listening comprehension, social skills, motor skills or some combination thereof.

If you have a disability that has gone undiagnosed, you are three times more likely to drop out of school. I would almost guarantee their child is one with a disability. Children with disabilities, diagnosed or not, can usually push through to high school. Eventually, they want the torture to stop.

Here is my recommendation for any parent in a similar position, who wants to really help their child:

• Start by requesting, in writing, a full and comprehensive neuropsychological testing including all academic areas.

• Enroll your child in virtual school or private school.

Again, the story you printed was hardly uplifting or inspirational; instead, it was a sad commentary on why we have such an explosion of drops out and addicted young people in our country. It is a parent's job to figure out why a child would want to drop out of school, not let them. I hope parents will instead try the tactics outlined above. — Dawn W.

Dear Dawn: I appreciate your thoughtful insights and regret not speaking to these points myself. The Individuals with Disabilities Education Act helps ensure that students with disabilities are granted the accommodations they need, and coming up with an individualized education plan. Parents who wish to learn more can visit the Department of Education website (https://www2.ed.gov) and enter "FAPE" (short for "Free Access to Public Education") into the search bar.

DREAM

"So this past year I teamed up with Charlie Rohlfing and we've done a few paying gigs together. We call it the Charlie & Margo Show, or maybe Margo and the Scattercats! He plays a few songs, I sing harmony with him and bang the tambourine. Then I play a few and Charlie fills in with electric guitar.

"It's so fun! I love the banter between songs, and the audience feedback. It's the highpoint of my career so far. Getting asked to play at the Taproom is a huge honor. It's like the Carnegie Hall of Madison!

"I just have to say to anybody out there who's thinking about picking up the guitar, just look at me. I'm a perfect example of what you can do if you set your mind to it. When you live in a town like Madison, it's never too late."

In addition to playing lots of popular tunes, Margo also writes original songs. The song 'Unprecedented' was inspired by a recent photo she saw of deserted Louisville streets due to the pandemic.

UNPRECEDENTED
BY MARGO WATKINS

I saw a photograph of a street with no cars,
In a city of one million people strong
I saw an empty cathedral
And a world with no people
Something has gone terribly wrong
Unprecedented.
What if time stood still for a while
Gave us time to slow down for a while
To remember who we really are inside for a while
Take a breath for a while
Take a pause for a while
Stop the hate, keep it kind, and love our neighbor for a while.

BOARD

Main Street will remain the front entrance but a ADA accessible entrance will be located on the northeast side of the building.

In other business, the Board approved a request by Phillip and Kitty Smith and local Realtor Jim Pruitt, as the potential purchaser of the property, to remove a collapsed rear brick wall, windows and door and replace it with a framed wall and siding at 306 Jefferson Street.

Phillip Smith said the wall collapsed some time ago and is only going to get worse unless something is done and to replace the wall with original brick would be cost prohibitive compared to demolishing the structure. Pruitt said he is willing to buy the property, which adjoins his office, and do the work if the board approves rebuilding the structure using framed wall and siding. The area to be repaired does not face the street and if the work is not done soon, the 300 block of Jefferson Street could end up losing that building and possibly two others that share walls with the structure.

Pruitt said he would try to salvage any brick he can for another project he is doing that needs brick of that size and period. He said he is only interested in tackling 306 Jefferson Street because it adjoins his building.

After seeking other solutions that would follow more closely with Historic District guidelines, the board approved the application as proposed by Pruitt because the cost of preferred improvements would be prohibitive and the proposed work would save that structure and possibly others nearby.

"That building is the lynch pin to the whole block," said board member Ken McWilliams.

In final business by the Board on Monday, the members reached a consensus on several amendments to the Historic Board of Review's Rules of Procedures to allow more applications to be reviewed by staff and expedite applications and work on projects in the historic district. The emphasis of the decisions is to allow City Planner-Preservation Coordinator Nicole M. Schell and her staff and City Building Inspector Brian Martin to review and approve more applications without involving the Board of Review but retaining the option that staff members may choose to consult the board on any case in which they need additional interpretation or consideration.
